

Dan Martinson

Dan Martinson came to the world of real estate by way of owning property in South Carolina, Virginia, New York, Nebraska, Washington and Maine. After eight years in the U.S. Navy, Dan spent over twenty years in international software and hardware sales and marketing. During that time he traveled in and did business with customers in more than 35 countries and believes that being a good emissary for America was one of the most important responsibilities of that career.

Now in his sixth year in the real estate business, he has brought the communication skills honed in the international business world to the people that he represents as a broker; it's his belief that really listening to the client or customer is one of the most important services a realtor can provide. Of equal importance is adhering to the Realtors Code Of Ethics and to the laws and practices that govern this industry. He has served as Vice President, Secretary, and Director of the Downeast Multiple Listing Service and is a member of the Hancock-Washington Board of Realtors. He received his full Brokers license in May of 2006.

Being fortunate enough to live on the coast of Wohoa Bay in Addison has given Dan a first hand appreciation of how special Maine is and a strong sense of ownership and responsibility to preserve that treasure.

He takes all of his own aerial photographs and has had his photographs published in local newspaper photo contests. With a branch office in Addison, he specializes in waterfront properties in Downeast Maine and other unique offerings. "My first rule of business is to only represent properties I believe in...my second rule is only to do business with people with whom I have a mutual liking and respect. This formula has served both my customers and myself very well, and I look forward to serving them even better in our new business venture."
